"TIP" FROM EUGENIE.

NUCLEUS OF DR. EVANS' VAST FORTUNE.

How the American Dentist Acquired Wealth by a Hint From the Empress-Strange Bit of History.

The New York Herald says: Dr. Thomas W. Evans, an American dentist who had lived for many years in Paris, died at his home in the French capleaving an enormous fortune, valu at $35,000,000. In addition to the amassing of this great amount of wealth, Dr. Evans had long been an international characte by reason of the part which he played in the escape of the Empress Eugenie from the Parisian mob after the abdication and the Parisian mob after the abdication and capture of Napoleon.

Dr. Evans had completed his memoirs just previous to his death, and that incident will no doubt be fully described by his own pen. It is extremely doubtful, however, if he has permitted himself to dwell upon the secret of his wealth, or rather, upon the incident which started him upon the path to fortune.

Americans will be much interested in those $55,000,000, for Dr. Evans, despite his long residence abroad, was American to the core, and had often expressed his intention of leaving large sums of money to various charitable institutions in the United States. His last will and testament will prove an exceedingly interesting document. The remains are at present on their way to this country, and will be interred beside those of his wife, who died last summer, and who was buried in Philadelphia.

Crowned Heads His Patrons.

Crowned Heads His Patrons. Dr. Evans received the nucleus of his fortune from a "tip" given him by no less a person than the Empress Eugenie herself. Of course he enjoyed a most lucrative practice, and he has placed crowns in the mouths of a great many persons who also wore crowns upon their heads. Napoleon, the Empress Eugenie. Queen Victoria, the Prince of Wales, Emperor William and the sultan of Turkey were all numbered among his patients, and it is safe to sny that his fees were by no means small. No American, it is said, has ever enjoyed so firm a footing in Mariborough house.

small. No American, it is said, has ever enjoyed so firm a footing in Mariborough house.

He was a great favorite with Empress Eugenie, and he afterward demonstrated his loyalty by acting as her personal escort to England during the troublous times of 1870. One day she said to him: "Doctor, I presume you have saved considerable money from your income."

Dr. Evans acknowledged that there were a few francs to his credit in the bank. But she persisted and finally learned just how much he was worth.

At that time Baron Haussmann was planning how to pull down and rebuild Paris. The empress had in her possession a map of the future capital, showing the full plan of operation. This she placed before him.

The various improvements were all carefully noted, including the projected Bois de Boulogne. "It will be heautiful!" cried the doctor. "It will be heautiful!" cried the doctor. "It will be heautiful!" and the world."

"Stupid!" exclaimed the empress. "Do you think only of the beautiful? Have you no eye to the pseuniary advantages which this offers you."

Then she showed him another map, showing where she herself had invested in land. The doctor took his cue. He invested his entire capital in real estate. He purchased plot after plot of ground on the site of the Bois de Boulogne.

The magnificent avenue was finally projected, together with other vast improve-

The magnificent avenue was finally projected, together with other vast improvements which completely transformed Paris Real estate increased in value tenfold. Dr. Evans, acting upon "tips" received from the first lady in the land, awoke to find himself one of the rich men of Paris.

The remarkable success of this American dentist, in numbering among his patrons the greatest potentates of Europe, was due to his profound discretion. It is said of him that he never betrayed a confidence.

THAT TERRIBLE SWEDE. The Problem Was Solved at Last, Although the Dinner Was Late. From the Chicago Post.

She was sitting at one of the front windows waiting for him when he reached home, and her face was a picture of mis-"No dinner to-night," she said disconse lately. "What's the matter?" he asked.

"Has she left?" he demanded.

"Worse," she returned. "She won't go."

"You don't mean to say that she has defied your authority in your own house!" he exclaimed.

"Oh, dear, no. she answered, "She's very anxious to please and quite ready to do all that's wanted, but she doesn't understand. You see, she's a Swede and only knows a few words of English. At the intelligence office they told me that wouldn't make any difference, because the Swedes were very quick to pick up a language, and as I could get her cheap, I took her; but, John—"

"Well?" he said as she paused.

"Why, John, I don't care how quick she is at learning a language, we'll starve before I can make her understand what we want for dinner. I told her what to do when the things came from the market two hours ago, and just before you came in I went out to see how she was getting along, and found she had carefully put away the roast beef and all the vegetables for breakfast to-morrow and preprad some outmeal, codfish and buttered toast for dinner to-night. I tried to explain the mistake she had made, but she just nodded and smiled, and—and—I'm afraid we've come to a deadlock."

"Oh, I guess not," he returned. "The trouble is that you are not used to handling people who don't understand English very well, while I have to do more or less of it every day. I'll fix it."

He was absent in the kitchen about ten minutes and when he came out he went over in the corner and sat down, and for several minutes didn't do a thing except growl to himself. Then he asked if there wasn't some cold meat in the house.

"Not a bit," she replied. "There was some and I told the girl to put it away, but instead she gave it to the cat."

They sat looking at each other in silence, until the silence became oppressive, when she suggested that the woman at the intelligence office had said if they talked to the girl a good deal it would help her to pick up the language.

"If I talk to her much," he replied gloomity, "she is likely to learn to swear. Isn't there a Swede in the neighbo there a Swede in the neighborhood?"

"Why, of course," she answered, her face brightening. "You run right over to the Browns and ask them to loan us their coachman for a few minutes."
And thus the first great problem of that terrible Swede was satisfactorily solved, and dinner was only two and a half hours late.

BETTINA GERARD'S LIFE STORY Dates Her Downfall From Her First Husband's Upraidings-Schuyler

a Devoted Bushand. physician stepped to the bedside. "Mrs. Schuyler," he said, "you must have rest. You must stop singing." "But I will sing. These newspapers say my voice is gone. Is it? Listen!" and she began to sing again. "Drink this," said the physician, "it will began to sing again.

"Drink this," said the physician, "it will clear your throat."

Drinking it, in less than five minutes the patient was sound asleep, and Mr. Schuyler led the reporter into an adjoining room.

"Now," he said, "the newspapers have said that Betty was addicted to drugs. This is absolutely false, as are many other things that have ben printed about her. She is suffering from multiple neurits, brought on from her resort to stimulants when she should have taken food. Neuritis means a wasting of the nerve tissues. The only way to cure the disease is to remove the cause. That is why she is here."

When Bettina Ordway was 19 years old—she passed her 29th bigthday in Bellevue—she was married to a man she did not love. Of his devotion to her there has never been the slightest doubt. He settled a large sum of money on his child. Bettina Ordway had, and still has, a beautiful voice. She was reared in Washington, and, as the daughter of General Ordway, had every advantage. When she went to Vienna with her husband, where he was secretary of legation, she became a favorite at once.

Three days after their daughter was born Mr. Padelford stood at his wife's bedside and accused her of wrongdoing. From that moment Bettina Gerard dates her downfall. When she went on the stage she took the name of Bettina Gerard. Until the past year she has always commanded a big salary. She spent it as fast as she received it. Finally she met Mr. Schuyler. He knew all about her, but he loved her and married her. Nothing could exceed his devotion to her in her hour of trouble.

WALES SUPPER CLUB.

A Swell Institution Where Meals May Be Had After Midnight.

The Prince of Wales has just started the swiftest and swellest club that London has ever known. All society throughout the British kingdom is now talking about this new organization, and when the doors are thrown open early next month it will, it is believed, mark a new epoch in social are thrown open early next month it will, it is believed, mark a new epoch in social England.

The new club is called simply the Supper Club. It is for men and their women friends. It will be an institution of no interest whatever up to 12 o'clock midnight. But after that hour the meetings of the club, which are to take place in the fashionable Grafton galleries in the very heart of the West end, on Sunday mornings, will be a scene of fashionable revelry, lasting until dawn. The Supper Club is to be a sort of aristocratic all-night club, where dancing will be indulged in.

The Prince of Wales said that the time had arrived when some life and energy was to be infused into social London, which at the present time, closes its doors half an hour after midnight. At 12:30 in London, at the present time, everything shuts up, It is then impossible for a stranger to get a drink.

Visitors from the Continent, and espe-at the present time, everything shuts up. It is then impossible for a stranger to get a drink.

Visitors from the Continent, and especially from Paris, where cafes and danchalls are kept going until daylight, are at once struck with the gloom which suddenly settles down on London at 12:30, the hours when, in the opinion of many ladies and gentlemen of lively disposition, the real life of the city ought to begin. If your are a member of a West end club in London you can go in about 1 o'clock in the morning and get a drink. But you cannot take a lady with you. In any event you will be put out on the street at 2 o'clock in the morning, when most of the West end clubs shut up.

The club, as at present contemplated, will have quite a large membership. The limit has not yet been fixed, but it will start off with at least 200 active male members. These gentlemen, bringing ladies on their arms, will all turn out at the regular weekly gatherings of the club on Saturday nights, so that there will be over 400 people prepared to enjoy themselves when the ball starts rolling early Sunday morning. This large number will divest the club of any claim to being private. It will be more or less public, so that ladies who go there will be seen and known.

divest the club of any claim to being private. It will be more or less public, so that ladies who go there will be seen and known.

Right here comes in one of the most curious features about the organization. As at present contemplated, the club will meet only on Saturday nights. The fun will start there at midnight: on Saturday nights, Archbald Stuart Wortley is the secretary of the new organization and I asked him why Saturday night had been selected for the meetings of the Supper Club. He replied that on that night the bars and restaurants of London dose up unusually early, shutting their doors at midnight, and that it was impossible to get anything to drink after 12 o'clock. From this it will be seen at once that the revels of the Supper Club are to be held on Sunday.

It is interesting to look over the names of those who are launching the Prince of Wales' latest pet. A circular marked "private and confidential" has been quietly circulated during the past few days among the friends of members of the Malborough Club, describing in vague terms the purposes of the Supper Club and intimating that the names of a limited number of gentlemen, whose qualifications are not stated will be considered for membership. This circular bears several names not unknown in the United States. One of the foremost young swells, whose name is appended to this document and who is an intimate friend of his royal highness, is brother-in-law to a New York girl. This is the Earl of Ava, eldest son and heir to the Marouis of Dufferin and brother of Lord Terence Blackwood, who in 1833 married Miss Flora Davis of New York. Another of the promoters of this new organization, whose name is appended to the Marouis of Dufferin and brother of Lord Terence Blackwood, who in 1833 married Miss Flora Davis of New York. Another of the promoters of this new organization, whose name is appended to the Davis of New York. Another of the promoters of this new organization, whose name is appended to the provate circular is Geraid Paget, closely related to

A FEW "BULLS."

Not Horned Animals, but Queer Forms of Speech Attributed to Pat.

A "bull" in speech is defined as a grotesque blunder; an apparent congruity, but a real incongruity, of ideas. The Irish are credited with a peculiar talent for makcredited with a peculiar talent for maxing "bulls," why they have it, we do not know, except that it is a species of wit. Here are some examples:

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"That girl," she replied.

"Has she left?" he demanded.

"Worse," she returned. "She won't go."

"You don't mean to say that she has defied your authority in your own house!"

"Wonders I iver seen it bates them all. Sure it's a stamehead search in for wather."

wonders I iver seen it bates them all. Sure it's a stameboat searchin' for wather."
Another Irishman said: "I saw Pat Ryan the other side of the way. I thought it was Fat and Pat thought it was me, and whin I came up, begorra, it was neither of us. Another excused himself from going to church by saying he had such an excellent telescope that with it he could bring the church so near he could hear the organ playing. ng. was Pat who observed, after watching

It was Pat who observed, after watching two men shoot an eagle and kill it, that they might have saved the powder and shot, as the fall alone would have killed the bird.

Another Irishman assigned as a reason for not putting out a fire in his kitchen with a kettle of boiling water that was near that it was hot water; and it was Pat's reply to a man who boasted that he had the smallest horse in the country, "By me faith, I have wan as little as two of it."

me fath, I have wan as little as two of it."

Arother one is told of a horse. Pat said he could leap over a ditch at least thirty feet wide; but as Pat describes it, he did it in "two jumps."

And it was Pat again who, telling a story as original, and being informed by one of his auditors that he had read it in the translation of a Latin work, cried out: "Cenfound those ancients! They are always stealing one's good thoughts."

NEW RAPID FIRE PISTOL. Can Be Londed and Used Much Quick er Than the Army Revolver

Now in Use. A pistol designed to take the place of the small arm used in the army and navy has been invented and is now being tested by foreign governments. Fendall S. Pegram, who has just arrived in this country, ram, who has just arrived in this country, has placed it before the authorities in Washington for inspection.

The wenpon is known as the Mannlicher rapid firing pistol, and uses smokeless powder. The ordinary pistol cannot use this as the explosion would blow it to pieces at the weak junction point of barrel and cylinder. In the new weapon the firing barrel is of one piece, thus obviating this difficulty. The new pistol is also said to be a fine sporting arm.

The weapon weighs about 1½ pounds and shoots five times. As the shots are fired the shells are ejected by an automatic arrangement, and when the weapon is empty it is ready to be reloaded. It can be loaded and fired much quicker than the present revolver. The weapon can also be used as a rifle, as a stock has been invented to attach to it.

KRAPOTKINE'S CULT.

GREAT RUSSIAN ANARCHIST SAILS

He Wishes Bodily Harm to No Individual-Socialistic Eyes on the United States.

Prince Krapotkine, the Russian anarchist, who has been in this country for two months, has gone home. The prince's tour of inspection has been uneventful. He has not once been arrested—something which happens whenever he is discovered in any of the Continental countries and he has not even been followed by government emissaries. Prince Krapotkine says that socialists all over the world are watching

'Let me tell you that there is a struggle for freedom in America—not behind you, but before you—and this truth will soon dawn upon the minds of the people when they come to realize, as they surely will, that it is not the people who are triumphant, but the political bosses, and behind them the trusts and monopolies.

'The cause for the rapid strides which socialism is taking in the United States is very simple. It is well known that the people of the United States are at last beginning to do a little thinking on their own account. General education was never so strong as it is at the present time, and with the growth of general education, which enables the masses to think and act for themselves, there is surely an end approaching to the condition of things which allows the few to prey upon the privileges of the multitude.

'Boss rule is becoming more oppressive day by day, and the people, with their growing intelligence brought about by this nation is beginning to realize that the traditional forms of government are entirely inadequate.

"Boss rule is becoming more oppressive day by day, and the people, with their growing intelligence brought about by this general education, and shaking off of old traditions, are powerless to end this yoke under the present political system. The political atmosphere in the United States and elsewhere is corrupting and enervating.

"The great evidence of the real growth of socialism in the United States is the very large number of great strikes which the working people have begun and won within the last few years. There have been more great strikes within the past twenty-five years than there were in all of the seventy-five years preceding, and this is a strong proof that the masses are beginning to know their privileges, and to take radical steps to demand them from the capitalistic few.

"The recurrence of strikes is the greatest help to bringing about an era of socialism, not only in the United States, but in Russia and the European countries as well, for the masses are there being forced by their surroundings to be less adventuresome and to conduct themselves fhore conservatively than the masses of America, and would never dare to assert their rights if it were not for the example they see in the success of similar movements in the United States.

"All the socialistic world looks up to the progress of their brothers in the United States, and when the Russian people will have secured their complete freedom, as I confidently expect they wil in a few years, it will be owing to a very large extent to the hold which socialism has gained and is still gaining among the working classes of America."
